Denglisch

The influence of English on German — better or worse?

Global English · English as Europe’s lingua franca
Max Aulinger · Yeon Song · Kyung-chan · Ji Hyun

A NORMAL GERMAN SENTENCE

You don’t speak German.
How many words do you understand?

Heute habe ich ein Meeting mit meinem Team. Danach checke ich meine E-Mails, downloade die Files und gehe shoppen. Mein Handy ist fast leer.

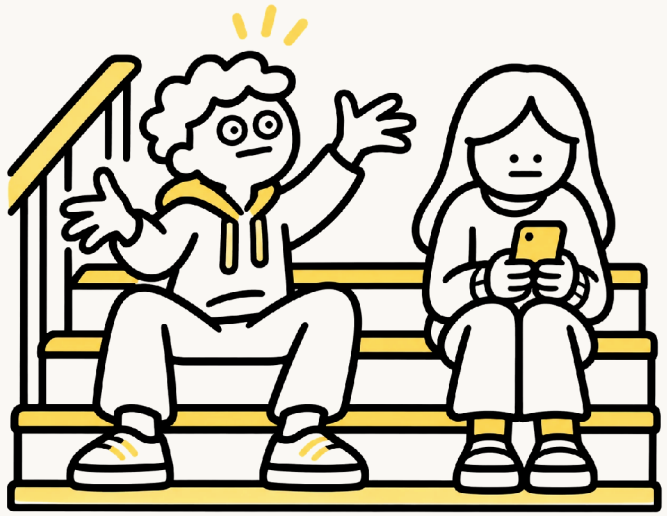

“Today I have a meeting with my team. Then I check my emails, download the files and go shopping. My phone is almost dead.”

8 English words in three short sentences — and one of them isn’t even real English.

DENGLISCH IN REAL LIFE

How young Germans actually talk

Das ist so cringe.	That’s so cringe.
Ich bin komplett lost.	I’m totally lost.
Actually hab ich keine Zeit.	Actually, I don’t have time.
Das war so random.	That was so random.
Literally jeder war da.	Literally everyone was there.
Ich hab keinen Bock. — Same.	“I can’t be bothered.” “Same.”

No translation, no new meaning — just English words dropped into a German sentence.

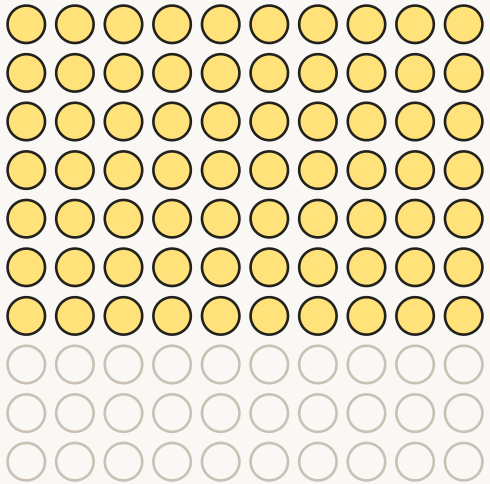

Almost every second European speaks English.

When a German, a Spaniard and a Pole meet, they speak English.

47 of 100

people in the EU can have a conversation in English

70 of 100

young Europeans — and that’s exactly where Denglisch comes from European Commission, Eurobarometer “Europeans and their languages” (2024).

WHAT DENGLISCH IS

Three ways English gets into German

1

Taken as it is

das Meeting

das Team

der Job

das Feedback

Same word — it just gets a German article: der, die, das.

2

English word, German grammar

downloaden

chillen

googeln

liken

ich habe gechillt — “I chilled”. English inside, German outside.

3

Fake English

das Handy

der Beamer

das Public Viewing

Looks English. No English speaker uses it like that.

JUGENDWORT DES JAHRES

Germany’s Youth Word of the Year

2008 – 2018 · CHOSEN BY A JURY

Gammelfleischparty 2008
hartzen 2009
Niveaulimbo 2010
Swag 2011
YOLO 2012
Babo 2013
Läuft bei dir 2014
Smombie 2015
fly sein 2016
I bims 2017
Ehrenmann 2018

4 of 11 English

SINCE 2020 · YOUNG PEOPLE VOTE THEMSELVES

lost 2020
cringe 2021
smash 2022
goofy 2023
Aura 2024
das crazy 2025
ragebait 2026

6 of 7 English

Since young people choose, almost every winner is English. 2025 even won “das crazy” — an English word with a German article.

yellow = English · dashed = from another language (Babo, Aura) · 2019: no winner. Source: Langenscheidt.

QUIZ · FAKE ENGLISH

These words look English.
But what do Germans mean by them?

Handy	Beamer	Public Viewing
Oldtimer	Home Office	Smoking

“Come in and find out.”

That was the English slogan of Douglas, a big German perfume shop.

In a 2003 study, many Germans understood it as: “Come in — and find your way back out.”

Not everyone in Germany speaks English. If people don’t understand it, Denglisch doesn’t bring people together — it shuts them out.

Words German already had

DENGLISCH	THE GERMAN WORD THAT WAS ALREADY THERE
Meeting	Besprechung
Feedback	Rückmeldung
Event	Veranstaltung
Sale	Ausverkauf
Deadline	Abgabetermin

These words don’t fill a gap. They replace German words that worked fine — often just because English sounds more modern.

Even Germans don’t know how to say it.

Ich habe die Datei _____ .

“I have ____ the file.” Which one is correct? Vote!

gedownloadet | downgeloadet | downloadet

The Duden dictionary says: downgeloadet. But in real German texts, about one in three people write gedownloadet.

Same problem everywhere: liken → geliked or gelikt? updaten → geupdatet or upgedatet?

THE CASE FOR

Sometimes English is simply the better word.

1

New things need names

Smartphone

Laptop

Podcast

Streaming

German never had its own words for these.

2

Short and international

Team

Job

online

okay

The same word works in Berlin, Paris and Seoul.

3

German makes it its own

Handyvertrag

Onlineshop

Teamleiter

gechillt

English parts, built into German words and grammar.

And it’s not new: Balkon and Toilette came from French 300 years ago.
Today nobody notices.

OUR ANSWER

Better or worse? Neither. It’s change.

WORSE WHEN …	BETTER WHEN …
it replaces a German word for no reason — Meeting instead of Besprechung	it names something new — Computer, Internet, Smartphone
people don’t understand it — “come in and find out”	it helps Germans talk to the rest of Europe
	Germans get creative with it — Handy, Beamer

German isn’t dying. It does what it always did: it takes words and makes them German.

YOUR TURN

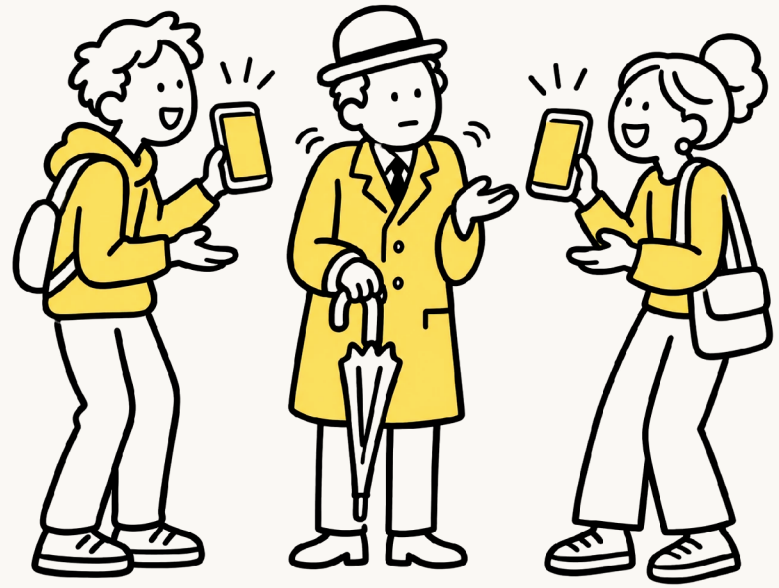

Germany says Handy.
Korea says 핸드폰.

핸드폰 = haen-deu-pon = “hand phone”

Two countries, two made-up English words for the same thing. Neither one is used in the UK or the US.

So — is English making German better or worse? And what about Korean?

hands up → better · worse · neither

SOURCES

Where we got this from.

English in the EU — European Commission, Special Eurobarometer 540 “Europeans and their languages” (2024; survey autumn 2023, 26,523 people)

Youth Word of the Year — Jugendwort des Jahres, Langenscheidt, winners 2008–2026

“downgeloadet” — Duden online, conjugation of downloaden; usage in real texts from the DeReKo corpus, as reported by Neerlandistiek (2021)

“Come in and find out” — study on English advertising slogans by the agency Endmark (2003)